

Accounting for Builders

"Grow Your Business, Grow Your Wealth"

"The long hours, travel and regulations in the building industry probably explains why trades people struggle with their bookkeeping and business administration responsibilities. Some of the largest financial obligations for a self employed builder include GST, BAS and tax payments but we still find many builders paying excessive tax and incurring fines for non-compliance."

Warrick Nancarrow - Director

Here at ProActive Accountants & Business Advisors we understand the building industry and our knowledge of the building trades can mean the difference between just surviving and potentially thriving. Apart from the usual small business compliance issues of GST, BAS, PAYG and superannuation, we assist clients with managing their cash flow and their choice of software to prepare quotes, invoices and manage their staff and apprentices.

Thinking Of Starting A Building Business?

Starting a building business is a bit like building a house. The foundations of your business are your taxation structure, accounting software and marketing. The corner stone of the business is your business structure and there are a number of different options including sole trader, partnership, company and trust. Asset protection is a key consideration when deciding on your tax structure because of the risks associated with the building industry. When making recommendations regarding your business structure we examine your family situation, profit projections and future plans regarding admission of new business partners. Accounting software selection is another brick in the business foundation wall and the wrong choice can be catastrophic. Poor records are one of the biggest causes of business failure in Australia and you need up to date, accurate financial records to make informed business decisions. We insist your accounting software matches your business needs and level of accounting skill to avoid what we describe as 'computerised shoebox' records.
